But the life of cavemen was dangerous. In winter it was very cold in the cave. There was ice and snow everywhere. Cavemen met together around the fire. They ate and drank hot food and drinks to get warm. They spent a lot of time sitting around the fire in a circle. They went to sleep together. In cold days wild animals got very hungry and cold. Sometimes a lion, a bear or a tiger came into the cave. And cavemen stopped them. They had a dangerous life, didn't they?

One day the King of Sharks saw a beautiful girl. He turned into a nice young man and the girl became his wife. They lived happily and every day the King of Sharks went swimming. Sometimes he stayed under the water for so long!

When their son was born, the King of Sharks went back to his people. The boy had a mark on his back. It looked like the mouth of a shark. Then the woman understood who her husband was.

The child's name was Nana. He liked swimming best of all. Every morning, Nana asked his people: "Where are you going to fish today?" The fishermen always told the boy where they wanted to go. Then Nana jumped into the water and came back late in the evening.

The fishermen soon noticed that they caught fewer and fewer fish.

"A bad god," their chief said, "doesn't let our fishermen catch fish."

So the chief made a bed of leaves. He told all the people to walk across the leaves. "The feet of a god don't leave any mark!" the chief thought.

The boy ran fast across the leaves and his feet didn't leave any mark. The village people wanted to kill him and Nana jumped into the water. He turned into a shark and joined his father in the sea.

That's why the Indian fishermen never tell anyone where they go to fish.
